DESCRIPTION

The biggest change in energy procurement in the past 100 years is happening right now, and the Bay Area is the center. Cities and counties are becoming energy suppliers through Community Choice Aggregation (CCA), and it's likely that you are one of their customers. Within a few years, the majority of Californians will be. This event will feature representatives from a number of local CCAs talking about what's new and exciting in their organizations—including programs, rates, new and planned solar projects, etc. Come and get the latest on the future of energy supply in California, with plenty of time for group discussion and Q & A. The organizations below are among those who will attend:
